	This course has flipped classroom ( ) delivery, where instead of attending two lectures, you are expected to undertake a minimum of 2 hrs work prior to each practical, where very experienced lecturer/tutors will engage interactively with you and the material. This course offers an introduction to the scientific research, theory and application concerning "resilience" as a key factor in life and learning success and wellbeing.

Questions about any aspect of the administration of the course should be directed to the course coordinators, preferably by email.

5. Communication skills	Group work, oral and written communication tasks (Report, Group Research Presentation and Peer rating).

Learning and application of psychology sickness or other circumstances outside your control, this may be grounds for special consideration to drop the course without failure. Please contact A/Prof Cranney as soon as possible if this is the case.

For every 6-credit-unit course, you are expected to spend an average of 10 hrs per week on that course—this includes class-time, pre- and post-practical preparation requirements outside class-time group work, data-gathering exercises, and the normal study time necessary to adequately complete assignments and examination study. Under no circumstances will employment be accepted as an excuse not to meet expectations for class participation, group work, or assessments. Remember, the semester times are quite short (final examinations will be upon you before you know it), so it is your responsibility to ensure that you do not fall behind with the ongoing assessment demands of the course.

	No required textbook, although some sections of the first-year psychology text by Burton et al. will be prescribed.
	Required readings will be made available on Moodle. The readings will include classic and cutting-edge articles and chapters in the areas of positive psychology, resilience, and experimental clinical psychology.
